How do I contact the instructor?

Jordan Morris- jmorris@richlandlibrary.com or 803.231.6386 (email preferred)

How long will it take for the instructor to get back to me?

2-5 business days, depending on the number of requests being received at that time.

What are the procedures for woodworking orientations?

Woodworking orientations start with a 30-45 minute meeting where the instructor shows you the shop and reviews policies and procedures for the space. You will discuss your past experience in woodworking and how you plan to use the space. At the end of the meeting, a 2-3 hour hands on orientation will be scheduled during which time you will work on a project of your choice. A waiver will be signed at this time. Follow-up appointments may be scheduled before an individual is approved access to particular pieces of equipment. The orientation process takes into account skill level and aptitude; the process may take less time for those with prior experience. *library card required

What are the procedures for woodworking appointments?

If you have a woodworking project for which you would like assistance or advice, contact the instructor to book an appointment.

How long does it generally take to get in to an appointment or orientation?

Wait time varies and can be anywhere from one to three weeks depending on availability.

How do I book open studio time?

The Workshop is not "book-able" but open and available to those with orientation unless there is a program or appointment. Customers are also welcome to email Jordan to inquire when the studio is closed.
